Looking north from the kitchen, you see the hallway in which was located the wardrobe (near left). Beyond the stairway, you see a hallway turning left. That heads to the front door. The open door leads into the common room.

CS Lewis Reserve (In Memory of Henry Stephen)

Berkshire
Buckinghamshire
Oxfordshire

Welcome to the CS Lewis Reserve, once owned by the celebrated author CS Lewis.

The pond was created when clay was dug in the 18th century and now contains a diverse range of wildlife, from frogs, great crested newts and sticklebacks to pond skaters and water scorpions. In spring many toads spawn here, and coots and among overhanging vegetation. In summer dragonflies and damselflies bring aerobatics and metallic colours to the scene. The dazzlingly coloured kingfisher and the grey wagtail are also seen here. Giant horsetail grows in water logged woodland near the pond.

Foxes and muntjac deer wander amongst the mixed woodland, which contains around 140 different types of fungi. A path leads through large sandstone boulders known as 'doggers'.

Management

Water features

- Keeping from silting up
- Deadwood
- Retaining standing deadwood favours insects, birds, bats and fungi. Log piles provide cover for small mammals

Woodland

- Thinning trees to ensure structural suitability for butterflies

What you can do

There has never been a more important time to JOIN your local Wildlife Trust.

Hundreds of local species are still in danger of extinction and precious wildlife habitats like the CS Lewis Reserve need to be saved.

We can save more wildlife sites - if you will help us.

Caring for wildlife costs money so please become a member, or join us as a volunteer today.
